2021-2022 SCHOOL PARENT AND FAMILY ENGAGEMENT PLAN

- How will the school aid parents in understanding the challenging State academic standards, State and local academic assessments, how to monitor their child's progress, and work with educators to improve the achievement of their children?

Response: The Title I Handbook will include information on their rights as Title I parents, as well as state academic standards. Individual class and grade level information is sent home in a hard copy on a weekly basis. Academic information/grades are always provided real time on the student FOCUS program for parents to keep up to date. With the implementation of the BEST standards, we have developed a new parent night to inform and equip parents with additional ways they can help at home as well as ask questions about their child's progress with school personnel.

- How will the school provide materials and training to help parents to work with their children to improve their children's achievement, such as literacy training and using technology (including education about the harms of copyright piracy), as appropriate, to foster parental involvement?

Response: A great tool that is provided to every parent on a weekly basis is our classroom newsletters. Teachers provide up-to-date information about student studies and provide information so that parents may work with students to improve student achievement. In addition, a variety of parental involvement opportunities are made available to parents to provide them with training and materials needed to work with their student at home in the area of reading, math, and science. During our parent nights, we are placing a strong emphasis on parent-teacher relationships with conversation starters, insight into the standards, games to help provide more books into each student's home, and key information on how parents can put the new standards into real life practice at home. We teach parents about our various computer programs including Benchmark Advance, iReady, Renaissance Place, IXL, and Lexia. We also send home multi-sensory reading kits and books to read nightly, so that parents can work on key reading skills with their child.

- How will the school educate teachers, specialized instructional support personnel, principals, and other school leaders, and other staff, with the assistance of parents, in the value and utility of contributions of parents, and in how to reach out to, communicate with, and work with parents as equal partners, implement and coordinate parent programs, and build ties between parents and the school?

Response: Our Reading Coach has been instrumental in assisting teachers with engaging, multi-sensory activities to assist parents as they work with students at home. She provides training for our paraprofessionals to better equip them for work in the classroom and after school tutoring. Through video and peer coaching we will increase communication in how to improve. Our SAC team is instrumental in bringing teachers and parents together in a meaningful way to bond the two partner groups in the common goal of assisting our students. Additional efforts are being made to inform and instruct both teachers as well as parents on new standards and curriculum.

- How will the school coordinate and integrate parent involvement programs and activities with other Federal, State, and local programs, and conduct other activities, such as parent resource centers, that encourage and support parents in more fully participating in the education of their children?

Responses: Many of our activities include make and take opportunities, or provide parents with learning materials to aide their participation in their child's education and success. Additional parental involvement programs and activities are coordinated with the school district to provide parents assistance and encourage full participation in their child's education. Examples include: Liaison for intervention and services, Child Find, CARRT, Family Matters of Nassau County, FIT program, and DARE program.
